XRF ANALYSER

Background information	Currently, our laboratory operations rely on a single XRF analyzer to support analytical requirements across all our sites. This setup presents a significant operational risk, as there is no backup system in place in the event of equipment failure. As of now, we are experiencing a breakdown of our existing XRF analyzer. This has caused delays and disruptions in critical laboratory activities, particularly for some of our sites whose sample analysis is currently on hold. The absence of a redundant system directly impacts production monitoring, quality control, and decision-making processes across our operations. To mitigate this risk and ensure continuity of operations, we strongly recommend the procurement of a redundant XRF unit. This additional unit will serve as a backup during maintenance or breakdowns, thus minimizing downtime, maintaining consistent throughput, and supporting our operational resilience
Scope of service(s) or product(s) required	The scope of service covers the procurement and delivery of a redundant XRF analyzer to ensure uninterrupted analytical operations across our laboratories.

Motivation for recommending this supplier	We recommend this supplier because we have already procured and are currently using XRF analyzers of the same brand from them across our laboratories. Maintaining consistency in equipment ensures compatibility with our existing systems, simplifies user training, and allows us to use the same calibration methods and spare parts. Additionally, working with the same supplier will make it easier to access technical support, repair services, and spare components in a timely manner, thereby minimizing downtime. The supplier is also familiar with our operational needs and has demonstrated reliability in previous engagements, which adds confidence in their continued support and service delivery.
