SCOPE OF SERVICES

Sample Requirements

No further sample mass is required for the testing as sufficient material is available from the 25-2264 testing programme to complete the additional flotation tests. Sample disposal costs and disposal terms were included in the previous test contract.

Sample Receipt

The client will be notified of the receipt of sample and any damage or losses that may have occurred during transport. The sample will be photographed, weighed and logged into the sample tracker.

The list of logged samples will be shared with the client to ensure that the correct samples and notations have been recorded. Any errors in this process will be corrected prior to commencement of testing.

Sample Storage

Samples will be stored at AHK MP-UK for a total of 3 months following completion of the project. At the end of this period samples will be disposed of unless otherwise agreed.

Sample Preparation

A representative feed composite will be generated using residual ore sorter and screened products. The samples will be reconstituted and homogenised based on reported mass splits into 1kg charges using a rotary splitter for testing. Previously generated grind curves will be utilised for size reduction and milled products will be deslimed via decantation targeting a 10µm cut.

Any additional sample preparation beyond that outlined in this proposal may incur further costs, this will be discussed with the Client at the time of sample receipt.

Assays

2 assay suites will be used throughout the testing:

1. Li only – fusion followed by digestion and ICP (standard 10-day turnaround) - ALS
2. Confirmation Assays – fusion followed by XRF for SiO₂ and Fe and fusion followed by ICP for Li (standard 10-day turnaround) - ALS

Flotation
